Popular Mechanics For May.

"Science and mechanics have advanced from the time when they were the hobbies of a few learned philosophers, secluded in home laboratories and workshops, or in the inner retreats of exclusive seats of learning. They have become, in the broadest sense, the principal aids to human progress, and as such they belong to everybody. The labors of the scientist, the inventor and the educator are for the people. Personal gain, in the form of money, advancement of fame, is a secondary matter, although it may, in some instances, form the motive for the work. And after all, it is the productive work of the people that makes it possible for learned men and specialists to discover and invent things that are making this world of ours a better place in which to live."

So states the May number of Popular Mechanics Magazine in a strong article on "Science and Plain English" in which leading educators and scientists of the country discuss the subject. However, one has but to turn the pages of the magazine—any number will do—to feel that these assertions are well grounded in its practice. The May number contains 301 articles and 293 illustrations, every article written so you can understand it.

The May Smart Set.

Olivia Howard Dunbar has a charming novelette in the May Smart Set, "Mark Venable's Son," the story of a sculptor who wins fame late in life, and the sacrifice made by his son. The son has dreams of a triumph in the same work, and sees ultimately the genius of his father brought to a higher development in himself. An unfortunate accident, in which the son nearly destroys his father's eyesight, results in a severe mental struggle and the ultimate relinquishing of the son's ambition to rival his father's renown. The study of character in this story is very pleasing.

Louisiana Style.

At New Orleans L. F. Ayaya shot and seriously wounded Archie A. Henderson, claiming he had ruined his home.

Averts Awful Tragedy.

Timely advice given Mrs. C. Willoughby, of Marengo, Wis., (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumption" cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote, "and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved my little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble." This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Becomes Suddenly Blind.

Madisonville, Ky., April 20.—E. G. Miller, a prominent restaurant proprietor of this city, has suddenly become partly blind, and a specialist at Evansville today expresses little hope of preventing total blindness. His eyes became affected about a month ago.

SHIP BUILDING IN HOLLAND

Not Only Builds Ships for Himself, but Takes Orders From Other Countries.

The usual conception of Holland is that of a land of wide bloomers, wooden shoes, windmills, cheese works and unbroken placidity. One scarcely realizes that the Dutch are a nation of truly great shippers and sailors. They not only have big seaports and sail ships well, but they are shipbuilders also. The French consul at Rotterdam recently reported that 75 large and medium sized ships were turned out of Dutch yards last year, aggregating 72,980 tons, while in 1908 there were 76 ships built, totaling only 63,806 tons. Small sea going craft and river boats were built to the number of 799. The average measurement of the vessels built last year was 973 tons.

Holland does not build ships for herself alone, but receives many orders from Germany and various South American nations as well. Last year Germany bought on order 60,760 tons, Belgium 9,382 tons, Great Britain 4,279 tons, Argentina 2,160 tons, and Brazil 1,010 tons.

This does not seem so enormous when one hears that the new sea going monster Olympic is to measure up to 60,000 tons, but it is a good record for Holland and helps to disprove the general notion that Holland's attention is divided between the contemplation of storks and tourists.

MARKS OF CORONADO'S TRAIL

Remains of Buildings Erected by Old Spanish Conquerors Still Seen in Santa Fe.

Down in old Santa Fe, the capital of New Mexico, the oldest seat of civil and religious government on American soil, there exist many remains of buildings erected by the old Spanish conquerors of the country. One of these, the Adobe palace, has been used as the "executive" mansion since the first governor and captain general, Juan de Otermin, occupied it in 1680; while the cathedral, built in 1761, is rapidly crumbling away, and will soon be replaced by a modern stone building.

Another interesting ecclesiastical edifice is the Church of San Miguel, erected in the sixteenth century, but destroyed during the Pueblo revolution of 1680, and rebuilt in 1710. Close to this structure stands a house generally recognized as the "oldest in the United States." It was built before the Spanish conquest, and it is traditionally reported that Coronado lodged in it in 1540.

ANIMALS AND MUSIC.

Experiments have recently been made to test the effect of music on animals. Among a number of horses, a French military doctor, who played the violoncello and flute to them, found a few who made it clear by pricking their ears and by their movements that they liked melody. Another Frenchman tried Beethoven and Schubert on his dog, with disastrous results. But simple tunes and harmonies gave the animal much pleasure. The elephants in the Jardin des Plantes at Paris were treated to an orchestral concert, and showed their high intelligence. They moved rhythmically with the music, proved their dislike of discords forcibly, and became calm and excited in accordance with the moods of the music.

SOME NATIONAL ANTHEMS.

The Portuguese will have to seek a new national anthem, for the one hitherto in use is by no means suited to a republic. It was composed by an emperor, Dom Pedro, of Brazil, and, like the British anthem, is an invocation on behalf of the sovereign. Possibly the new anthem will be shorter than the old one, which drags somewhat toward the end. The length of most national anthems is in inverse ratio to the size of their proprietary countries. There are only sixteen bars in the Russian anthem, and 28 in "Hail Columbia." But in the Siamese anthem there are 76 bars, and the inhabitants of San Marino require 97 bars to express their patriotic fervor.

WOES OF WEALTH.

Passion Players are Married

Berlin.—Thousands of Americans who admired her sympathetic impersonations at Oberammergau last summer will be interested in learning that Fraulein Ottilie Zwink, who played the role of the Virgin, has just married. Her husband is a young fellow player named Bauer, a son of the famous burgmaster of Oberammergau, Sebastian Bauer, who gave so powerful a representation of Pontius Pilate. Fraulein Zwink, who is a daughter of the incomparable Judas Iscariot, Johannes Zwink, the housepainter of Oberammergau, will never again be permitted to portray the Virgin, because the role is given only to an unmarried woman.—Washington Herald.

Do Ghosts Haunt Swamps?

No, never. It's foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against in swamps and marshes, bayous, and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever, weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroys and casts out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "and I've had fine health ever since. Use this safe, sure remedy only. 50c at all druggists."

Day Elected.

William A. Day, J. Pierpont Morgan's candidate, was elected president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. The directors went on record of mutualization, following a speech made by the State Department of Insurance.

FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

She Was There.

Mrs. James Schmidt, of St. Louis, confessed that she was with Dr. Clemenson all of the night on which his wife died, and that at his trial he protected her name at the cost of a twenty-year prison sentence. Her sworn confession is expected to result in freedom of the Chicago physician.

It's Equal Don't Exist.

No one has ever made a salve, ointment or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer of Cuts, Corns, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Scalds, Boils, Ulcers, Eczema, Salt Rheum. For Sore Eyes, Cold Sores, Chapped Hands or Sprains its supreme. Unrivaled for Piles. Try it. Only 25c at all druggists.

REAL TRAGEDY

Enacted on the Stage of Livermore Opera House.

Will Porter, a negro, was lynched on the stage of the operahouse at Livermore, Ky., Thursday night by a mob of fifty men. He had earlier in the day shot and fatally wounded Frank Mitchell, a white man.

Gives Aid To Strikers

Sometimes liver, kidneys and bowels seem to go on a strike and refuse to work right. Then you need those pleasant little strike-breakers—Dr. King's New Life Pills—to give them natural aid and gently compel proper action. Excellent health soon follows. Try them. 25c at all druggists.

But She Got Her Way.
The difference between a "henpeck" and a masterful husband is that one gives in at once, while the other does it the next day.

BREACH OF LEGAL ETIQUETTE

Conflicting Opinions of Mdle. Miropolsky Divide Members of Paris Bar.

Conflicting opinions as to the conduct of Mdle. Miropolsky, a brilliant young "Portia," divide the membership of the Paris bar. Some days ago it appears Mdle. Miropolsky delivered a lecture at the Theater du Chatelet. The young and handsome "avocate," whose charms and fascination have caused havoc among the younger Parisian barristers, appeared in a stylish dress, a ravishing hat, and a stole of the latest model.

Unfortunately for Mdle. Miropolsky, at the bottom of the printed program distributed to the audience were the words: "The dress and hat of Mdle. Miropolsky are from the 'ateliers' of Mme. So and So." This terrible breach of legal etiquette was reported to the council of the order, and that grave and learned body will shortly meet to sit in judgment.

Meanwhile the bar is split into rival camps. One side does not see anything so very dreadful in the enterprise of Mdle. Miropolsky's "couturiere," while the other sees nothing less than the collapse of the dignity of the order if such customs are allowed to gain ground. They see visions of young barristers indicating their tailor on their cards, or giving statistics of their success in defending their clients.

CARRIED TO GREAT LENGTHS

Dr. Spurgeon's Comment When First Introduced to Dr. Dixon of Chicago.

Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., pastor of Moody's church in Chicago, filled the Metropolitan tabernacle of London recently.

The British Weekly, commenting pleasantly upon Doctor Dixon's acceptability in this position, recalls a story of his first visit to England 20 years ago, and his introduction at that time to Dr. Charles H. Spurgeon.

Spurgeon was seated one day in his vestry, a large Bible before him on the table, about which were gathered his deacons in solemn conference, when William Oney entered and introduced to Mr. Spurgeon a very tall young man. Tiding in his visitor from head to foot Mr. Spurgeon—with the familiar twinkle in his eye—quietly remarked: "Well, well, I have always heard they carry things to great lengths in America."

UNBOHEMIAN BOHEMIA.

When one looks at Murg's bust in the Luxembourg garden, near the Odeon gate, one is rather startled to have an impression of somebody well to do and not exceptionally poetical. There may be a slight veil of sadness over the face, but it is a fat and comfortable face a la same, and the decoration of the Legion of Honor in the well fitting bronze coat speaks of happiness and decency, of efforts rewarded and of promises for the morrow. A lot of Villon, if we possessed one, would never impress us in that way. The fact is that Murg had a bit of a lucky career. The son of a German concierge and almost self-educated, in spite of some time lost trying to paint, he wrote at the age of twenty-three or four in the most brilliant Paris newspapers; at twenty-eight he made a big success with his "Vie de Boheme," which was immediately put on the stage, and shortly after he was on the staff of the Revue des Deux Mondes, then in its most exclusive period, and till his death in 1861, at the age of thirty-nine, he was in uniformly smooth water.—Saturday Review.

WHAT PEOPLE READ.

"Any great calamity that is near enough at hand to excite our horror and sympathy helps the sales of newspapers," said the newsdealer. "So does a great prize fight that has been a long time looked for—people want to know the result; and the same is true of important elections. But it might surprise you to know that there is always a large extra demand for newspapers containing reports of long talked about great weddings."

"We all think that everybody reads the newspapers, but as matter of fact there are still many people who are not regular newspaper readers, who buy only on great occasions, on those occasions of one sort and another that individually interest them."
